Measuring and layout

1. When measuring, show dimensions in inches and preferably use a pencil for easy changes.
2. Start with a rough drawing of the shape of your kitchen to note measurements, include doors, windows, breaks in the walls, appliances, sinks and the layout of your existing kitchen.
3. Start measuring from a corner. Start three to four feet from the floor and measure to the first opening or obstruction. Make a note of the measurement. Carry on measuring around the room in this manner.
4. Make note of the locations of all electrical outlets, wall switches and lighting fixtures. Show all plumbing and gas connections.
5. Indicate in which direction doors swing when opened, and where they lead. Mark the location of all ducts, vents and radiators.
6. Note any special features that will affect your desired layout. Check by adding your measurements for each wall and comparing them to the opposite wall.
7. Once you have completed noting all the dimensions in your kitchen on the sketch, measure the overall length and width of your kitchen and ensure that all your individual measurements add up to the whole.
